Pyrox for Potatoes

You insure your buildings in the most reliable company; and you insure before-not during-a fire.

Insure your crops in the same way, using the most reliable insecticide and using it early. A little spray will cover a large area when the plants are small, and it pays to kill the tough old shellbacks when they first appear. They eat but little and are not easy to kill, but they can be given enough Pyrox to do the work without burning the foliage.

Pyrox kills potato bugs, caterpillars and similar pests. Pyrox will not wash off, but will stick like paint until frost comes.
